

THE BUHL FOUNDATION
CONFIDENTIALITY POLICY

The Buhl Foundation complies with applicable disclosure law and makes appropriate records open for public review including annual reports and Form 990's. The Foundation also has access to confidential information on employees and that information should not be divulged to outsiders or third parties except as authorized or necessary to comply with applicable laws, rules or regulations.

Although most information received from prospective grantees as part of the Buhl Foundation application process is publicly available information, the Buhl Foundation respects the privacy of all organizations and individuals. Any information designated confidential or non-public by applicants to or grantees of the Buhl Foundation is not disclosed to third-parties without the approval of the applicant.
